VIEWS DIFFER
ON "NORWAYS"New York Handlers Express
Their Opinions to the Fishing Gazette.

"I consider the market for Norways just what they will bring on actual bidding and sale," said a leading New York authority last Wednesday. "I don't subscribe to that attitude which places a fictitious value on fish just because one considers them worth a fancy figure. I honestly don't think that prices for Norway mackerel will go any higher. I am sure that the representative of the Norway fishermen's Union did not realize his ambitions. In fact, he went home this week a very disappointed man. He was much taken aback by the limited amount of business he did here, and openly said so."

The early receipts of Norway salt mackerel seem not to have given satisfaction to buyers on the score of quality, judging by complaints now being filed," said a leading New York authority, Thursday.

The following opinion was delivered by the executive head of a leading New York house this week:

"There have been large arrivals of Norway mackerel and quite a little business has been done. There has been no trouble whatever to dispose of real fine, fat autumn mackerel, but unfortunately a lot of Norway mackerel has arrived here which showed poor or mixed quality, and receivers of these lots are having troubles of their own. On the whole prices for Norwegian mackerel are very reasonable at the present time, and it is the general belief that prices are very likely to show a smart advance before long."

"The Norway mackerel market closed strong last week," said a reliable New York authority. "Efforts by certain short interests to bear the market came to naught. The demand is not active, but fairly good for the season," he concluded.

Dingle, October 5—There were about 60,000 Irish mackerel landed here last week. Of these about 50,000 were cured, and will count about 380 fish to a packed barrel.

Catch of mackerel in Norway.—Sea packed mackerel landed in Norway from the North Sea, salted for export to America for the week ending September 26, 1914, 2630 bbls.; total to date, 34,321 bbls. Number of boats, 408. Total catch in 1913, 33,673 bbls. by 363 boats; in 1912, 42,293 bbls. by 536 boats; in 1911, 45,654 bbls. by 758 boats. Total catch of mackerel in the coast fishery to date in 1914, 9,971,110 fish, of which 1,734,260 were salted.—Fishing Gazette.

Whaling Station to Close Soon.

The Pacific Sea Products Company, which operates a whaling station at Akutan Harbor, Alaska, expects to close the plant for the season on October 10. The latest news received from the station was under date of September 1, and at that time 250 whales had been killed.

OUR HALIBUT ARE TOO LARGE?

Apropos of the shipments of Prince Rupert halibut to eastern markets, the Halifax Herald wonders, 'Why does not Nova Scotia fish find a place on Montreal tables, 3000 miles nearer?' If the Herald refers to Atlantic halibut, a prominent fish dealer writes, the answer is simple enough. Atlantic halibut runs to too large a size for the requirements of the Canadian market and the retailers will not buy large fish when they can procure mediums and chickens such as come from the Pacific. The Atlantic halibut is in no way inferior to the Pacific article, but size is against it. Until we can train this flatfish to refrain from growing after it has reached a hundred pounds there will be no ousting of Atlantic halibut from Eastern markets by the Pacific fish.—Canadian Fisherman.

"Some" Fish Business.

Newfoundland's annual sale of dried fish to Northern Brazil is said to be about 250,000 quintals. This is more than the total catch of Nova Scotia from all sources.

Going Bluefishing.

Capt. Almon D. Mallock has stripped sch. Alert and will now fit the vessel for south snapper fishing for the winter.

FISH NOW A MORE REGULAR DI

Says the Canadian Fisherman: There is no talk of hard times the Canadian fish trade. Some concerns may feel the effects of the European struggle, but as a rule are patriotic enough to remain optimistic and make the best of this. On the other hand, a number of large producers in the fresh fish business supplying the inland markets doing exceedingly well and looking forward to a good winter.

On interviewing several of the dealers in Montreal, the writer hears no complaints of the war affected trade—indeed, the only complaints made were about the unseasonably warm weather. All the concerns reported good orders and a steady demand for fish—in many cases an increasing demand.

There is no doubt about it, that is becoming more of a regular than formerly. People are beginning to eat more fish, and within the month we have noticed a number of articles in newspapers scattered throughout the country advocating the use of fish in place of meat. Publicity is what the fish business needs to create a demand, and publicity the right sort is not to be had without spending money. With the causing people to cut down living expenses, the present is a good time to start advertising fish. It will in the long run.

Ashore and Floated.

The small fishing sloop Magna of this port ran ashore on Nix Thursday night, outward bound from Boston and a hole stove in her bottom. She was floated by the Stony Beach Life-Saving crew and beached at Hull Gut. wrecking tug, Susie D. attempted to float her Sunday and bring her to Boston, the hole in her bottom being temporarily patched, but the tug mast broke and her machinery came disabled, forcing a return to Boston for repairs.—Yesterday craft was floated and will repair in Boston.

TRAWLER'S TRIP BROUGHT $900

The adoption of power trawling for fishing in many parts of the world has been frequently described in Consular and Trade Reports. At England, all previous records in connection with the local fishing industry were broken on September 23 by trawler Dane. The vessel had 100 off the coast of Iceland, and its realized $9,000, or $1,000 more than previous record figure. In this instance, however, the owners were helped by the keen demand for fish from London.
